Russians Reject Reagan's Latest Missile Offer

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union has formally rejected President Ronald Reagan's new proposal for an interim accord on limiting nuclear missiles in Europe with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko describing it as "unacceptable" and "not serious."

Challenging Mr. Reagan's assertion that his proposal opens "the road to agreement, to peace," Mr. Gromyko said Saturday at a news conferto agreement, to peace." Mr. Gromyko said Saturoay at a news conference: "No, this is wrong; it is not a road to peace or to agreement. The gulf between an agreement and these proposals will become even wider."

He said the U.S. proposals reflected a "deeply wrong" view in Washington that increased pressure on Moscow would increase the chances of reaching an agreement.

Under the revised proposal presented by Mr. Reagan last week, the Soviet Union would dismantle some missiles, of a number yet to be specified, and the United States would deploy its missiles un-til an equal number was reached. Both sides would then begin re-

Mr. Gromyko reiterated his government's objection to the exclusion of French and British missiles and U.S. forward-based strategic aircraft from the U.S. proposals.

Although most of the press conference dealt with the issue of ouclear weapons, Mr. Gromyko touched on other issues.

He made an unusually warm bow toward Israel by voicing the hope that "healthy" forces in Israe-b politics would bring about a change in Israel's foreign policy. the views of extremist Arab circles" that want to "liquidate" Israel.

He said Syria, a close ally of Moscow, would be prepared to withdraw its forces from Lebanon if the Israelis did the same. Mr. Gromyko, 73, was recently promoted to the post of first deputy prime minister. He confirmed Saturday that his new post made him responsible for coordinating all aspects of foreign relations.

During the two-hour news conference, he underscored Moscow's view that the United States was responsible for a deterioration in the international climate, asserting that we want to have better relations with the United States, but the United States does not want to improve its relations with the Soviet

Asked about Mr. Reagan's speech March 8 in the National Association of Evangelicals in Orlando, Florida, in which he referred to the Soviet Union as an "evil empire," Mr. Gromyko said such "in-sulting" remarks "do not lend authority to American foreign policy. You don't conduct affairs with other countries like this."

The news conference was carried live on Soviet television and by Intervision, which covers Eastern Enrope. Mr. Gromyko appeared to be very self-assured and physically fit as he stood the entire time, first delivering a long introductory statement without notes and then field-

A new element in Mr. Gromyko's presentation was the inclosion of a broader argument about medium-range nuclear weapons in Asia. For the first time, a senior Soviet leader said that SS-20 ouclear missiles were being deployed in Asia to counter U.S. nuclear delivcry systems in Japan, South Korea, the Indian Ocean and the Gulf. He said the Soviet Union was "surrounded by a ring of military bases" where U.S. "medium-range"

Missile Plan Is Still Alive

Officials Link Hope To 'Restrained Tone'

WASHINGTON — The Reagan dministration says it is disappointed at the Soviet rejection of President Ronald Reagan's interim nuclear arms proposal but insists "there is still life" in the U.S. plan.

in Asia as well as in Europe. in rebutting these claims, U.S. officials point out that in 1979, when the Soviet Union had more than 400 warheads deployed oo SS-20 missiles, Leonid L Brezhnev claimed that a balance existed.

Today there are more than 1,050 warheads deployed on more than 350 SS-20 missiles, and the Soviet Unioo is said to add roughly one new missile each week. The West still has no such weapons, yet the riority in the number of warheads over the Warsaw Pact. Kremlin continues to elaim that a balance exists, the officials said.

Washington claims that the missiles, which can hit targets in 15 minutes, should be the focus of the initial phase of negotiations and that to include aircraft now would divert attention from the more urgent problem of missiles.

But even if aircraft were counted, the official NATO analysis shows 2.500 Soviet and Warsaw Pact aircraft capable of hitting Western Europe with atomic bombs against 450 U.S. and allied Officials reiterated that the 144 submarioe-based British sod French missies and the 18 French land-based missiles are sovereign forces oot controlled by NATO and are meant as a last-ditch deterrent against atomic attacks on hose countries.

They cannot deter attacks on other allied countries, which is why U.S. missiles must be deployed to link the overall security of Europe to the U.S. muclear deterrent. The officials also said that the Soviet Union has 950 other longerrange, strategic submarine-based

Both sides know they are entering a bargaining process and are staking out their initial positions. In the end, since the Democrats control the House and the Republicans control the Senate, they will have to compromise their differences on the budget in conference. While the budget sets overall spending targets, individual legisla-tion is occided to authorize and appropriate specific funds. Some of the earliest battles could come over additional proposals to deal with unemployed workers and ineffi-cient industries.

The House-passed budget plan leaves room for $17 billion worth of new programs, but Democratic leaders privately admit the figure will shrink substantially by the end of the budget process. They also wonder whether they can pass legislation that will add significantly

Brownie Is Kicked Out For Unpaid Cookie Bill

MOUNT CLEMENS, Michigan - Girl Scout officials have transferred an 8-year-old girl to a new Brownie unit after her first troop leader ousted her because a customer moved away without paying for five boxes of cookies.

Penny Franco of Clinton Township was at home Wednesday preparing for a Brownie meeting when the troop leader called and said she "wouldn't be welcome," said Michelle Franco, Penny's mother. "She told me not to bother bringing Penny to the meeting," Mrs. Franco said. "It was all over the cookies."

The customer had ordered five boxes of Girl Scout cookies but moved away before coming up with $8.75 to pay for them.

On Thursday. Girl Scout officials apologized for the incident and placed Penny in another Brownie troop. Mrs. Franco said.

The Brownies are the youngest Girl Scouts.

"It looks like the troop leader did a very dumb thing." said Jean Czopek, program director of the Girl Scouts' Otsikita Council in

Mrs. Franco said the troop leader had demanded payment by the family, but the girl's father had been out of work for 14 months and had received his final unemployment check.

"We had already bought six boxes of cookies to help out," said Mrs. Franco. "We just didn't think we could afford to buy another five." Penny sold $70 worth of cookies, including $10 to her own family, and gave the money to the troop.

'Nonexecutive Stress' Is Tied to Heart Disease

By Bryce Nelson New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Executive stress has been a popular subject for years among psychologists and mass market writers. But the greater cause for concern in occurrence of heart disease, as a group of American and Swedish researchers oow sees it, might appropriately be called "nonexecutive stress."

From studies based on 5,100 Swedish and American men, the in-vestigators found that heart disease is more prevalent in workers such as cooks, waiters, hospital orderlies and assembly-line personnel, who combine heavy job demands with a low ability to influence how their

They assert, however, that the project already points to the first scientific conclusions linking decision-making capacities to the inci-dence of heart disease.

The chief investigators included Dr. Tores Theorell, professor at the National Institute for Psychosocial Factors and Health in Stockholm, and Dr. Joseph E. Schwartz, an assistant professor of sociology at Columbia. They reported their findings, based on examination of 2,950 Swedish workers, in the July 1981 issue of the American Journal of Public Health and in the March 1982 issue of Social Science Medicine, a British journal. Another study, based on 2,150 American workers, which was completed in September 1982, is still in manu-director of the organization, the Worldwatch institute, said the 2 percent current rate of world economic growth was less than half the rate four years ago.

If it continues at 2 percent, as many economists expect, oearly half the world's people, most of them in Third World countries, will have lower incomes and declining standards of living, Mr. Brown aid. His assessment was in a Worldwatch pamphlet sponsored by the United Nations Population Fund and called "Population Policies for a New Economic Era."

"In an age of slower economic growth, improvements in living standards for these people may depend more on the skills of family planners than on those of economic planners," Mr. Brown said.

The majority of those most affected by these trends, Mr. Brown contended, live in countries where populations are expanding at 3 percent or more a year.

He said the world is dividing into two groups, one where eco-comic growth exceeds population growth and the other where it does not. "One group can hope that the future will be better than the present," he wrote. "In the other, hope

Medicine and Death

Regarding "Medicine and Death. Should Remain Enemies" (IHT, March 24) by Matthew Conolly:

The timing of your columns on medical ethics was excellent, coming as they did the day Dr. Barney Clark was removed from his mechanical heart. However, Dr. Conolly's essay did little to shed light on a difficult subject. "Assisted suicide"? Those of who have watched relatives subjected to intensive care procedures might well choose to call the release from machines and drugs "unassisted life." By polarizing medicine and death, Dr. Conolly distorts the experience of patients, relatives and clinicians who realize that death is an inevitable part of life itself and must at some point be accepted, regardless of the tools that can be used to postpone it. Patients have little doubt that their doctors can keep them alive; what they are anxious to know is whether they will be allowed to die when they no longer want aggressive interventive procedures performed on them. They fear the unthinking applica-tion of intensive care to their already suffering bodies.

Consider in this regard Dr. Conolly's view of the trust that a patient bestows on a physician" -"a trust that the physician will take all reasonable steps to heal." Trust is of course necessary, since physicians possess skills that the patient does not have or is unable to use himself. But Dr. Conolly seems to include in this trust which is given over to the physician a complete giving over of the patient's interests, so that the physician decides not only medical matters but also ethical and personal ones.

The question of whether to en one's life so as to avoid further suffering is not one that the physician - or Dr. Conolly's "we" decide for the patient. Mr. Fairlie of resurrection or deliverance, marked or would like to see more ceremony in Congress dates linked to the coming of spring, give Easter and Passover their special richness.

Rites that edge too far from their roots be-come empty ceremonies. In the Soviet Union, to assuage people's thirst for ritual, the state tries to assume the ceremonial functions of the church. At the local Palace of Festive Events its citizens celebrate birth, marriage and death in elaborate rites performed by robed officials. But the new rites "often seem pale imitations and even parodies of what they were meant to supplant," our colleague Serge Schmemann noted in Kiev last month.

There are some who would like to see more state rimal in the United States.

"American public life is starved of ceremony and even, one may say, of pageantry," Henry Fairlie wrote recently in The New Republic. Is not the Senate cloyed with enough courtliness already? If we decked out attorneys in black robes and white horsehair wigs, they might charge double fees for the performance, but would they perform doubly well?

Ritual is the proper province of church, not state; of private observance, not public function. Ritual makes a mystery of life and death, invests meaning in the imponderable, and stages a play in which human cycles and natore's have their appointed roles.

Easter, in the West, is marked on the first

The Soviet foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, who is supposed to know more about the West than anybody else in Moscow, chose this, of all weeks, to reject and even mock Ronald Reagan's latest offer to compromise on the unclear issue. There were demonstrations in Britain and West Germany against placing U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 mind their own business. "Well," as Mr. Reagan is always saying we should not forget the past; and on Cathedral Hill in Washington, while Capitol Hill's: politicians were away for the Easter recess, the past was not forgotten.

The preachers were insisting that, while church and state had been separated as institutions since the start of the republic, there was no way to separate morals and politics. Religion in America takes no direct part in the government of society," de Tocqueville wrote in 1835, "but it must be regarded as the first of their political institutions." Although religious groups and leaders, he added, took no direct part in political activities, religion in America had a decisive, though in-direct, influence on the minds and hearts of the people, shaping their

This is not as true today as it was when de Tocqueville wrote "De-mocracy in America," but even Mr. Gromyko and Yuri Andropov do not ignore the power of the church. You can disagree with the Moral Majority in the United States, or the syatollah in Iran, or the Protestants and Catholics in Northern Ireland, or the Jews and Arabs in Jerusalem. It is easy to do so because we now have "religious wars" fought by people who believe more in fighting than anything else. But you cannot deny the power of religion, even at a time when it is supposed to be de-clining around the world.

There is a problem when the antinuclear people in Europe take a stiff-necked moralistic position, presuming to speak for the moral order in the name of the Lord, and then depart from philosophy and resort to physical action by blockading U.S. military installations. That may be the worst way to-get the peace they want.

There is another problem, which even those of us who share the ob-jective of getting rid of all nuclear weapons don't understand about the peace movement, as it is called in Europe. This is the vague, anti-nuclear, "plague-on-both-your-houses" thetoric about Washington and Moscow, as if they were the same, and Europe could then be rid of them and take care of itself.

Nothing would be more popular in America. The response here, I think, would be, "High time!"

There is something silly about all this. Mr. Reagan wants to put more nuclear missiles in Europe. Mr. Andropov and Mr. Gromyko are all for their missiles but not for America's missiles. It's a children's game, because even if we could agree on the balance at Geneva, both sides would still have enough to destroy each other and blow up the world.

That is why there has been such a clash between clusted and state this Easter. The state is arguing for the power of more and more military weapons, and the churches are argu-ing for the hope and power of re-conciliation and resurrection.

Each in its own way is right, so why not let the debate go on? Let church and state argue about morals and politics — they have done so for centuries. Let Mr. Réagan argue for zero-sum missiles and then amend it and have Mr. Gromyko reject it. The guess here is that after all the arguments and demonstrations, they will heed the old Russian proverb that "a bad compromise is better than a good battle."

The only trouble is that after they agree to compromise at Geneva, no matter how many nuclear weapons they agree on, they will still have enough to destroy the world they say they are trying to save.

The definition he gives of his aim now is simply that "it won't be the same social groups who have power in France when we finish." That is a vague way to approach a determina-tion to redistribute power in tradi-tionally polarized, stratified France.

No doubt it is why he seems vague, hard to pigeonhole, in a party be patched together from an assortment of Marxists, utopians, flaming radicals, rough-handed wine growers and factory workers, technocrats and reformist moderates.

Holding the party together seems to be his major effort. That is one reason he holds onto the Communists in government, for their departure could split off his left wing. Another is that after some weakening mistakes, the economic program would not stand much chance if the Communists used the unions they dominate to stir widespread labor trouble. And another is that the vagneness and lack of efficiency have failed to win enough new support from the center to sustain a majority without the Communists.

A balancing act can be a dangerous operation. That is how Britain's Harold Wilson drove his Labor Party over the brink from acceptable opposition to turbulent leftism. Mr. Wil-son worned so much about preventing splits that he undermined the solinstream of labor leadership.

At this point Mr. Mitterrand is trying to show sympathy for those who cry that he is abandoning Socialist plans and ideals, and also for those who cry "halt before you ruin everything." One set resents the austerity program because it punctures their illusions, and the other is chary about whether it is persistent and clear-minded enough to restore vigor.

Watching Chicago Fall Apart

By David S. Broder

CHICAGO — What is happening in Chicago is ugly but not unexpected. The mayoral race between Democrat Harold Washington and Republican Bernard E. Epton has brought to the surface the racial ten-sions that have always been here. As the April 12 voting nears, little is being said by either man about the problems of the city or his approach to solving them. "Mayoral candidate Harold Washington throughout his campaign so-licited votes from black audiences by is not a racist act to unite ... Harold Washington will surely represent his people if elected. Where will this leave our people? We have for years paid taxes to support his parasite; constituency. Now they want it all."

The flier had a disclaimer saying it "is not sponsored by any political organization or candidate," but it pointedly concluded: "Remember, your Democratic primary vote does not mean you cannot vote for the other party in April."

At a newsstand, near where it was. handed out, a sweet-faced young white girl, wearing an Epton button, said there was a simple reason why most of her Polish-American customers were voting for Mr. Epton: "They think if Washington wins, the blacks will take over the city."

This ugly contest has important national implications for both parties. But for one who grew up in the Chicago area and went to college in this city, it is the unraveling of the city that is overwhelming.

This was supposedly "the city that works" during Mayor Richard J. Daley's long reign. But a native must admit the unraveling is not unexpected. All through the Daley years, when Chicago was held up for admiration as an example of a thriving mattern washed different to the property of the property of the property of the property washed different to the property washed to the property washed different to the property washed to the property metropolis, the system worked differently for different people, and blacks' got the short end of the stick.

DARIS — With the cost of overnight money in New York soaring to 10½ percent, the Eurobond market closed early for the spring holiday last week trusting that the Easter burnay would stomp interest rates

The sharp rise in the key federal funds rate in New York, from the 81/2 percent prevailing earlier, was widely attributed to end-quarter tensions and bankers were confidently predicting that short-term rates would now be free to ease and that the bond market would come back to life. Awaiting this event, the market did little but mark time last week with Both issues bore what looked like low compons of 10th percent. But if the terms were mappealing, the names of the issuers were not. Fed up with the flood of bank paper and hungry for high-grade corporate paper, investors rushed to buy the $50 million of eight-year bonds offered by BMW — its first ever Eurodollar bond — as well as the $50 million, seven-year bonds of Gasunie,

The Gasunie issue was an interest-rate swap and talk in the market put its cost of floating-rate money at some ¼ point below the London interbank offered rate.

The market's apparent indifference to the coupons was taken as indication of how hungry investors are for high-grade corporate bonds. Also, bankers noted, the issues were small compared to the near standard $100 million that most borrowers seek these days. "There is investor appetite out there," one banker thansodized, "even at prices competitive with New York." He estimated that BMW and Gasume paid slightly less — by about some 10 basis points — than U.S. government paper was fetching in the New York market.

Assured of investors' interest, the only question that bankers have is whether many corporate borrowers of such high quality are ready to tap the market. Most companies are said to be holding back, waiting to offer the control of the control bonds when rates fall lower.

Meanwhile, the market is bracing for a new flood of bank paper. oumber of Australian banks are reported to be in the wings and a $100-million, 10-year bond issue for Fun Bank is also imminent. A number of other Japanese banks are also reported to be preparing issues.

In the Deutsche mark sector, the World Bank floated $300 million of 10-year bonds at par bearing a coupon of 71/2 percent. The paper was quoted on a when-issue basis at a slim discount of 14 point. By contrast, the InterAmerican Development Bank, which investors fear must he sitting on a lot of risky paper these days, priced its 200 million DM of 10-year, 74-percent bonds at 99% to yield 7.83 percent. But the paper was trading at 98% for a yield of 8 percent.

Renfe, the Spanish railway, is currently offering 100 million. DM of eight-year bonds at par bearing a coupon of 84 percent. This was quoted on a when issued basis at 98% for a yield of 8.47 percent. A small 50-million-DM private placement was made for Takugin, a small Japanese bank. Its eight-year bonds were priced at par bearing a

Joseph V. Vittoria: His defection to Avis brings a lawsuit from Hertz.

Hertz, Avis Feud Over Man

New York Times Service NEW YORK - It is a tale of corporate intrigne that makes Dallas's Ewing Oil Co. look tame. The allegations include stolen corporate documents. broken employment contracts and the secretive

In the already combative rental car business, a recent $25 million lawsuit — the Hertz Corp. vs. Avis Inc. — reflects the bitter feelings surrounding the actions of one man: Joseph V. Vittoria, a former president of Hertz who last month became

Mr. Vittoria — and some of the 15 Hertz employees who followed him - are accused by Hertz of taking confidential documents and trade secrets to Avis. The lawsuit also claims that Mr. Vintoria met secretly with Avis before leaving Hertz and-that he violated an employment contract barring him from working for a competitor for two years

So far, Hertz has failed to get a court order enjoining Mr. Vittoria from working for Avis, a subsidiary of Norton Simon, but has been successful ng some documents returned.

For the first time, the Irish are giving lenders the choice to price prime rate or 14 points over the rate on 90-day certificates of de posit if that is cheaper.

Portugal, whose proposed for a $400-million loan was rejected by banks, is now expected to come to market seeking only $300 million. It will pay 1/4 point over Libor instead of the 1/4 point that it had originally sought, or 45 basis points (100 equals one percentage point) over the prime rate instead of the 30 it had sought.

Banks are still dickering over the terms on Turkey's proposed $200million loan. It looks like it will bear a margin of 1½ points over Libor, as the Turks originally sought, but will run for five years instead of the seven sought initial-

Abu Dhabi Gas Liquefaction Co. is discussing terms for a $500million loan. But trouble spots are the maturity - 12 years sought by the company and only eight suggested by potential lenders — and the spread. ## U.S.: Hopes and 3 Big Fears

H. Erich Heinemann New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Just about everybody — in Washington as much as on Wall Street — agrees that the U.S. economy is off the ground af-NL U.S. economy is on the grant of the preliminary "lash" estimate by the Commerce Department indicates that the gross national product rose at an annual rate of about 4 percent in the first quarter - subpar by NL standards of past economic reco-veries, but still the best performance in two years.

The crowds of Easter shoppers suggest that people are going back to work and are loosening up their purse strings. The consensus among forecasters is that the quarterly growth rate in the economy ter by the end of the year.

However, there is plenty to wor ry about. The fear — which is un-derstandable in light of the sputtering performance of the U.S. economy for the past four years - is that interest rates may surge long be-fore the recovery has a chance to gain momentum. This could easily choke off the boomlet in housing, and knock the automobile market back to the depressed levels registered last spring.

Whether the business expansion will be sustainable beyond the next few operters has become an important topic of debate among orecasters. Most analysts are on the side of continued growth, but recent increases in interest rates have raised new concerns.

In each of the last four years, the economy has shown brief periods of strength, only to fall back once again into stagnation. From July 1980 through March 1981, for instance, total output rose at a rate of about 4.5 percent. But tising inter- Heebner, executive vice president est rates stopped that recovery in and chief economist of the Phila- from the Treasury, this would lead

Alan Murray, a veteran forecastr at Citibank, noted the other day that new orders for durable goods

Sales of domestically produced automobiles, meanwhile, have slipped below 6 million units at an annual rate, despite widespread promotion of subsidized financing on new cars. By traditional Detroit standards of 10 million to 12 million cars a year, this is hardly a

Even more worrisome for some economists are signs that factory output may have flattened out. According to Townsend-Greenspan & Co., a leading economic consulting firm, preliminary indications sug-gest there may have been a small drop in industrial production in Even so, both Citibank and Townsend-Greenspan expect continued growth. And Lacy H. Hunt, chief economist of Carroll, McEn-tee & McGinley, a government bond firm, is still more optimistic. He believes that a "broad-based recovery" is under way, and that GNP in the second quarter will rise at an 8 percent annual rate. Housing, business capital spending con-sumer outlays, agriculture and for-eign trade, Mr. Hunt said, would all contibute to this result.

Sustained expansion in the U.S. economy would be welcome news all over the world, but especially among Third World countries, which have been struggling to increase export earnings to service their international debts. In the view of many analysts, there are three major obstacles to sustained business growth in 1983 and 1984 - the management of monetary policy, the budget deficit and the weakness of international trade. Each of the three present difficulties to be avoided. Monetary Policy. The Federal Reserve's decision last summer to ease its policy and start pouring new reserves into the banking system is widely credited with reducing interest rates. This was the principal factor that kicked the economy into gear in the first quar-

However, in the last three months, despite Federal Reserve efforts to hold interest rates down, credit costs have started to inch up again. This has occurred in the face them solve their problems. of continued very rapid monetary growth, fueled in large part by a $3.6-billion cut in bank-reserve reautrements.

The surge in the money supply seems to have pushed expected future inflation higher, even though actual current inflation is still declining. In fact, the real cost of short-term credit has increased sig-nificantly, since current inflation has been dropping while nominal rates have increased modestly.

• The Budget Deficit. Over the last six months the Treasury has been borrowing at an annual rate well in excess of $200 billion Meanwhile, demands for funds from the household sector - for home mortgages and for consumer the National Bank of Hungary, ex-installment purchases — are now pressed a common view on a visit starting to rise. There is concern among participants in the financial markets that if the Federal Reserve tried to hold down interest rates in the face of large credit demands to excessive growth in the money Supply.

The parallel is not precise, but "serious problems" that he said from May through November aged, or there is real risk that this surged, only to be followed by new spike in interest rates and renewed recession.

> International Trade Problems. A sustained U.S. economic recovery is obviously a critical domestic issue. Equally as important, in the view of most economists, are the international implications of U.S. performance as well the impact of the world economy on the United States. Most analysts are agreed that without growth in the United States, it will be difficult (perhaps impossible) for other industrialized nations to expand.

> At the same time, underdeveloped nations — which have roughly $600 billion of international debt, much of it now being renegotiated - are depending on growth in the industrial countries to help

But none of these problems can be viewed in isolation. High real interest rates in the United States have attracted funds to the United States, which helped to push up the value of the dollar in the foreignexchange markets, which cuts into U.S. exports. According to Scott E. Discount Corp. of New York (and former head of foreign-exchange operations for the Federal Reserve), there has been a "serious deterioration of U.S. trade performance owing to "appreciation of the dollar over the past 2½ years and the worldwide recession."

In fact, all of the decline in the real output in the U.S. from the beginning of 1980 to the end of 1982 - and then some - can be traced to a drop in net exports.

Despite all such problems, the growth will continue. Most economists believe that if the combination of lower inflation, lower oil prices and lower interest rates holds together, the way should be clear for sustained growth.

POWER AND PRINCIPLE Memoirs of the National Security Adviser 1977-81

By Zbigniew Brzezinski. 587 pp. $22.50. Farrar Straus & Giroux, 19 Union Sq. West, New York, N.Y. 10003.

Reviewed by Walter Goodman,

TATED to follow, if not to fill, the footsteps I of Henry Kissinger, Zbigniew Brzezinski has delivered his memoirs of his service as national security adviser to Jimmy Carter. Just as his career has been less grand than Kissinger's, so is his prose less magisterial. Where Kiss-inger was eloquent, Brzezinski is earnest. The stiffness of his detailed accounts of the major foreign-policy episodes in which he played a part is not relieved by extensive reliance on a ournal he kept during his time in office, perhaps with this very use in mind. It is as sponta-naps with this very use in mind, it is as spontaneous as a term paper.

But if "Power and Principle" offers few amenities of style, it does help us to assess, sometimes despite the author's loyal intentions, the Carter administration's reputation for disarray in foreign policy. Not that the administration was without its accomplishments:

the Persona Carel Treety improved relations. the Panama Canal Treaty, improved relations with China, greater attention to human rights and, preeminently, the Camp David Accords between Egypt and Israel. Brzezinski adds to our appreciation of such efforts. But then there were the embarrassments, attributable partly to bad luck, partly to uncon-trollable events and, in considerable part, to something about the nature of the Carter team: the failure to have the SALT II treaty ratified; the start and stop responses to Soviet adventures in Africa and Afghanistan and empty fulminations over that Soviet brigade in Cuba; the turnabouts on the neutron bomb, on Soviet participation in the Middle East settlement, on the United Nations' resolution involving Jerusalem, and, finally, the inability to contain or even influence, except for the worse, the revolution in Iran.

The public sense that confusion was a hallmark of that administration is pretty well confirmed by this book. Brzezinski found Secretary of Defense Harold S. Brown an uncertain ally, Vice President Mondale overly con-any show of harshness toward Israel and Stansfield Turner's Central Intelligence Agency uninformative at critical moments. Although Brzezinski expresses pro forma admita-tion even for these colleagues, the president alone is treated reverently throughout. No chapter lacks its passage of praise for some remarkable quality of Jimmy Carter. More-over, like an old performer digging out his press releases, Brzezinski quotes every scrap of compliment that the president ever threw his way on a ceremonial occasion. After a while, this courtier-like performance provides a laugh or two in a book that is not rich in wit. (The quality of humor around the White House, which seems to have consisted mainly of jokes involving animals and children, is appalling. The one good joke in the book we owe to China's Deng Xiaoping, a reply to Carter's request for eased emigration from China: "Fine. We'll let them go. Are you prepared to accept 10

cerned about the domestic repercussions of

The most interesting chapters have to do with Washington's handling, if that is the word, of the Iranian crisis. Entirely unprepared for the force or pace of the events that led to the overthrow of the shah and the ascender nce of the Ayatollah Khomeini, the baffled U.S. leaders went into paroxysms of paralysis. The Iranian cruption exposed dramatically the deep division between Brzezinski and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. While the national security adviser argued for a military coup in defense of the shah or, at any rate, of a relatively moderate regime. Vance "simply played for time always arguing that the sext concession to the shah's opponents was less dangerous than the difficult and dangerous decision for Washington to stage a coup." If Brzezioski felt lonely in calling for a coup, Vance was alone in opposing the attempt to rescue the American hostages. When that end-ed in fiasco, by the peculiar logic of Washington politics, it was Vance who resigned.

Brzezinski defines their differences in terms of power and its uses: "For me the highest form of attainment is to combine talk with action, and I believe that power should be a means for attaining morally desirable ends," he writes, and "when a choice between the two had to be made, between projecting U.S. power and enhancing human rights (as, for example, in Iran), I felt that power had to come first. Without credible American power, we would simply not be able either to protect our interests or to advance more humane goals."

Thus, the national security adviser wanted to send an aircraft carrier to the Indian Ocean to discourage the Soviet adventure, via its Cuban surrogate, in the Horn of Africa. When the administration did nothing he "thought seriously about the possibility of resigning." Whereas the secretary of state hoped that a new SALT agreement would lead to a wider U.S.-Soviet accommodation, Brzezinski saw it as "an opportunity to halt or reduce the mo-mentum of the Soviet military buildup." In a similar spirit, he viewed a strengthening of ties with Beijing as a means to pressure Moscow.

Wilander Routs Purcell at Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO (Reuters) - Mats Wilander of Sweden defeated Mel Pur-cell of the United States, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, to win Sunday's final of the Monte Carlo Open termis tournament Purpell tried to disrupt Wilander's baseline game by repeatedly reshing the net. But Wilander produced a stream of winners that brought victory in an hour and a half and extended his unbeaten string on European clay to 28 matches.

Wilander began his run last summer when, at the age of 17, he succeeded compatriot Bjön Borg as the youngest player ever to win the French Open.

Ranked eighth in the world, Wilander was the No. 3 seed here. He gained the final by defeating Italian Corrado Barazzntti, 6-2, 6-3, Saturday afternoon.

Pincell became a finalist when Manuel Orantes of Spain, after losing the first set, 6-3, and trailing, 1-2, in the second, pulled out of their match. Because of Friday's rain, three quar-terfinal matches were held over and were played Saturday morning. Wilander made the semis by bearing Frenchman Henri Leconte, 7-5, 6-0; Barazzatti upset No. 2 seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, and Orantes oust-ed Frenchman Yamnick Noah, 2-6, 7-6,

That is when the Cougars seared the Cardinals with a dunk-shot express that became a five-minute, 21-1 streak. The Congars took a 70-58 lead with 7:29 remaining, then coasted home to a 94-81 victory in an National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament semifinal game here.

Houston (31-2), which has won 26 straight games, will play North Carolina State for the championship Monday night.

At the heart of the Houston explosion, which ended Louisville's 16-pame winning streak as well as its 32-4 season, was 7-foot sophomore center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, who finished with 21 points. Although Olajuwon made only three points in the decisive streak, he pulled in every defensive

Although all the pregame hype centered on the two front lines, the first-half hero was a guard. Wagner scored 12 of the Cardinals' first 24 points and a half-high 16 points

Houston ran off a 7-0 streak at the start of the second half to transform a five-point deficit into a 43-41 lead with 17:57 remaining. Drexler began with a three-point play from inside; short jumpers by Micheaux and Young finished it

Then Louisville struck back. And back. Rodney McCray, play-ing in his 14th NCAA tournament game (second to the record 16 held by UCLA's Marques Johnson) scored from inside, then on a fastbreak dunk. Then Scooter McCray scored on a lay-up and another fast-break dunk.

Houston was missing on the other end, and Louisville went off on a 14-2 streak to take a 55-47 lead with 13:10 remaining

Further problems cropped up for Houston when Lewis chose to keep Micheaux in the game after he committed his fourth personal foul with 16:21 left. #### Conditioning Process

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — Whenever King Hussein tosses out a hint that he might join negotiations if the Israelis were to suspend set-tlement of the West Bank, the answer from Jerusalem is a terse: "No preconditions."

The reaction of most Americans to that response is: Why preconditions? Why not just No condi-

No such challenge was offered in 1967, when the Israelis launched a pre-emptive strike. There is no such thing as an "emptive" strike. In Latin, emere is "to buy," and preemers is "to buy beforehand," or to take action before another action takes place; pre-emption is sometimes called "doing it to others before others do it to you."

Why, then, the concern about tition? Yes, it can be redundent. It is a condition of your employment that you get paid. You set certain conditions before you enter into a marriage: who does the dishes, the family position on GATT, etc. Why, then, call them

"Redondaney is not always a bad thing," replies Fred Mish, edi-torial director of Merrian-Webster. "Not all conditions are preconditions; for example, hard work is a necessary condition of success, but it is oot a precondition because the condition is met in the process. The two words are not absolutely interchangeable. When you want to stress the before element of a situation, then precondition is better and clearer than condition."

Lawyers will say that precondition comes from condition precedent (rhymes with antecedent), which means, among other things, a con-dition that must be in effect before an agreement becomes effective. No, that's not the etymology; condition, in that sense, means state of affairs, but in the sense we're talking about, it means prerequisite.

Gold Theft in New York

NEW YORK - Burglars smashed their way into a wholesale jewelry company over the weekend and escaped with more than 900 pounds (400 kilograms) of gold chain valued at about $6 million,

Samuel Taylor Coleridge first used precondition in 1825; it's a good word; don't knock it. What we can knock, however, is the epidemic of ill-fixed prefixes. "I have known many couples who deny their engagement," writes Mary Pat Gassmann of Ol-ney, Illinois, "but will admit to being pre-engaged. Some of these couples even go so far as to have pre-engagement rings."

Precooked? The meal is either uncooked or cooked. Buy it cooked, or half-baked, not pre-Pretested? That means it was tested before it was tested, a redundancy worthy of scorn.

Preplanned? Now we're getting silly. I've heard of postplanning, which happens when White House staffers say, "How do we make it look as if we planned it this way?"

I HIS BROCHURE was printed with monies originating outside government sources." So announced a missive from the President's Commission on Executive

A few days later, President Reagan told the National Association of Manufacturers: "I am proposing that $60 million of the monies already appropriated for our worldwide military assistance pro-grams be immediately reallocated to El Salvador."

Money is a singular noun. When you have a lot of it, you still have a singular noun. Two bits, once the price of a haircut, is money; a milon dollars is real money.

However, an irregular plural exists for people who like to add an s to their words: Monies can be found in most dictionaries and in the vocabulary of pompous writers. Why is it picking up steam at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue? Per-haps the new habit of adding an s to revenue has something to do with it. Art and Belief Over 5,000 Years

By Richard Eder Los Angeles Times Service

NEW YORK - Peasants turn them up from time to time in the fields of Irac and eastern Syria. They are tiny cylinder seals, azure, sea-green or rose. They are made of carnelian, agate, chalcedony or lapis, and they glitter at the end of a tunnel of symbol and belief that stretches back 5,000 years.

The Pierpont Morgan Library has a selection on display through April 10. The seals, some barely an inch long, with em-blematic pictures delicately cuit into them, are certainly works of art. So are the impressions they make when rolled on clay or cloth. The Morgan displays the seals along with tablets showing the impressions: a spearman fighting a rampant lion, a stag treading on a snake, a bull and Edith Porada, a specialist in old Near Eastern art, emeritus professor at Columbia and one of the organizers of the show, prepared the impressions. The pristine beauty of the impressions — the lions, bulls, men and odd winged figures have a freshness and vivacity as if the dawn of art were something more than a metaphor — are only part of the show's purpose. Entitled "Symbolic Animals, Monsters and Demons in Antiquity and the Middle Ages," it uses the seals, along with manuscripts and assorted artifacts, to illustrate a series of themes.

One of these is the antiquity of the symbolic use of animals. Ancient eagles served as divine emblems, recurred in medieval iconography to represent the Gospel of St. John, and emerge variously in the modern symbolism of flagstaff tops and German double eagles. A bristling, crazed lion adorns a huge foundation nail from 2000 B.C., represents ootions of combat through the centuries, becomes the sign of St. Mark's Gospel and ends up proclaiming the var-ious glories of the British crown, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the scaled storage vessels and au-thenticated tablets that were sometimes used, almost like checks, for trade and payment. The emblems on them were propitiatory and perhaps celebratory. They were small tokens of idenoity and favor; not plastic, like credit cards, but stone and

MUNICH POSTCARD Auf Wieder 'Dallas'

By John Dornberg mal Herald Tribu MUNICH — How will West Germany survive the next six months? Indeed, can it? The question does not allude to Chancellor Helmut Kohl's new government nor to the entry of the Greens into the Bundestag. Neither does it pertain to the bleak economic outlook, the record unemployment rate, nor the acid rain that seems to be responsible for the destruction of the country's forests.

A far worse specter will haunt West Germany after April 5 — Die Dollasiose Zeit. That is the six-month period — 26 bleak Tuesday evenings ahead — when "Dallas," which has run for 87 continuous episodes since the late summer of 1981, will be off the air. A half-year without J.R. Ewing's evil grin or Sue Ellen's big blinking eyes, without Bobby's naivete or Miss Elly's efforts to keep the clantogether? Some politicians in Bonn are predicting a national crisis. Psychotherapists and marriage counselors are girding for a half-year of graeling overtime work.

Only sociologists are secretly delighted by the opportunity for com-prehensive behavioral studies. "The country," Munich's usually low-key Süddeutsche Zeitung editorialized the other day, "may never be the same again. Families are endangered. Latent marital crises are sure to eropt. Singles will be faced with crushing boredom. The structural sequence of the week will change."

No other U.S. television series or TV serial of any kind - has ever been as popular here as "Dallas." Since it began nearly two years ago, 66 percent of the country's 21 million television sets have usually been tuned into the show every Tuesday evening at 9:45 P.M.

As people sit at home, gived to the tube, restaurants, cales and beerhalls seem almost empty. There are families who refuse social engagements on Tuesdays. Theaters and concert halls have recorded half the usual audience turnout

Watching the German-dubbed version of the show has been a jarring experience for anyone fan with the U.S. original J.R. Ewing speaking a bit like Kohl or chuckling devilishly like Mephisto in Goethe's Faust makes the realities of Southfork Ranch seem there a viable German equivalent to the proper Texas twang?

But such linguistic insufficiencies are more than compensated by the absence of commercials. That is one of the benefits of public television which, if the new center-right coalition of Christian and Free Democrats gets its way, will not be so public or noncommercial much

The Germans being as they are, the popularity of "Dallas" has been dissected and analyzed by platoons of academics, all of whom insist, of course, that watching the show would ordinarily be beneath their dignity, were it not for the "scientific need" to do so.

"What has made it so success ful?" the daily Frankfurter Rundschan pondered recently. "In all likelihood, the finely balanced combination of an intact family engaged in permanent civil war. The Ewings fight out, on a large scale, the petty feuds of families everywhere. But the intrigue never goes far enough to endanger the family Surprise, the unexpected, may be what makes going to the movies or watching a TV detective show an attraction. One goes to the cinema to see something extraordinary, special, fantastic, unpredictable. But 'Dallas' is just the opposite. You watch because you know what it is all about. You know the people involved intimately and want to see how they cope with whatever happens to them next. The series is habit-forming."

Now the habit will be broken with a jolt.

The reasons are purely technical. There aren't enough episodes left in stock for a marathon run like the one just completed. In the United States the show is interrupted seasonally, but West Germany's ARD network began airing "Dallas" almost two years after the American debut, and the 87 episodes shown without interruption have nearly brought the serial up to date with the U.S. original. The six-month breather will allow for production of more episodes and time to dub hold out? The Süddentsche Zeitung struck an optimistic note. During the intermission," it said, "some people may even try reading a book."
